Tysean Bucknor
Write-up

It was unclear to me whether the def read_tags function should go before or after any other function.

I understood how arguments work, but I had no clue how to use them to create ratios for splitting the data. I tried to use the skeleton that was provided to us, but there was too little information for me to get started.

Based on the lectures and practica, I was unable to create a working code even after watching both multiple times. I also tried to use outside sources but the homework was too specific to use any of them. The homework was generally too difficult for my current knowledge of comp sci and it might be partly because I had a different professor for comp ling 1, which creates a sense of discontinuity that will take some time to bridge. I'm confident I will understand how to get these codes working with more practice. But, for now, I'm not there yet.